

Nehru Hits Reds On Hungary And N-Test Activity

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru of India said Sunday the Russians "behaved in a brutal manner in Hungary."

He said Communist domination of Eastern Europe sometimes "is even worse from the human point of view" than old-style colonialism.

His references to communism and to Soviet suppression of the 1956 Hungarian uprising came in a television interview with Ambassador Adlai E. Stevenson, U.S. chief delegate to the United Nations.

Italian Reds Seeking More Self Rulings

ROM (EAP) — Italy's Communist party, largest outside the Iron Curtain, indicates it wants more autonomy for individual parties and more open debate in the international Communist movement.

And one of its leaders suggests Italy's party investigate the reported disappearance of some Italian Communists in the Soviet Union during Stalin's rule.

These opinions, voiced by speakers at a meeting of the Italian party's Central Committee which ended Saturday, were reported Sunday by l'Unita, the official party newspaper.

The meeting was preoccupied by the Soviet drive to erase the memory of Stalin at the recent Soviet Communist party congress, attended by party chief Palmire Togliatti and other Italian party leaders.

Sen. Umberto Terracini said there was "a restlessness and a legitimate desire of the comrades to know why the Soviet leaders renewed the denunciations of Stalin." Terracini said he assumed Premier Khrushchev was seeking to wipe out remaining resistance by "anti-party" groups.

Other speakers also implied that it would have helped them to have more advance word on the fight against Stalin V.M. Molotov and others.

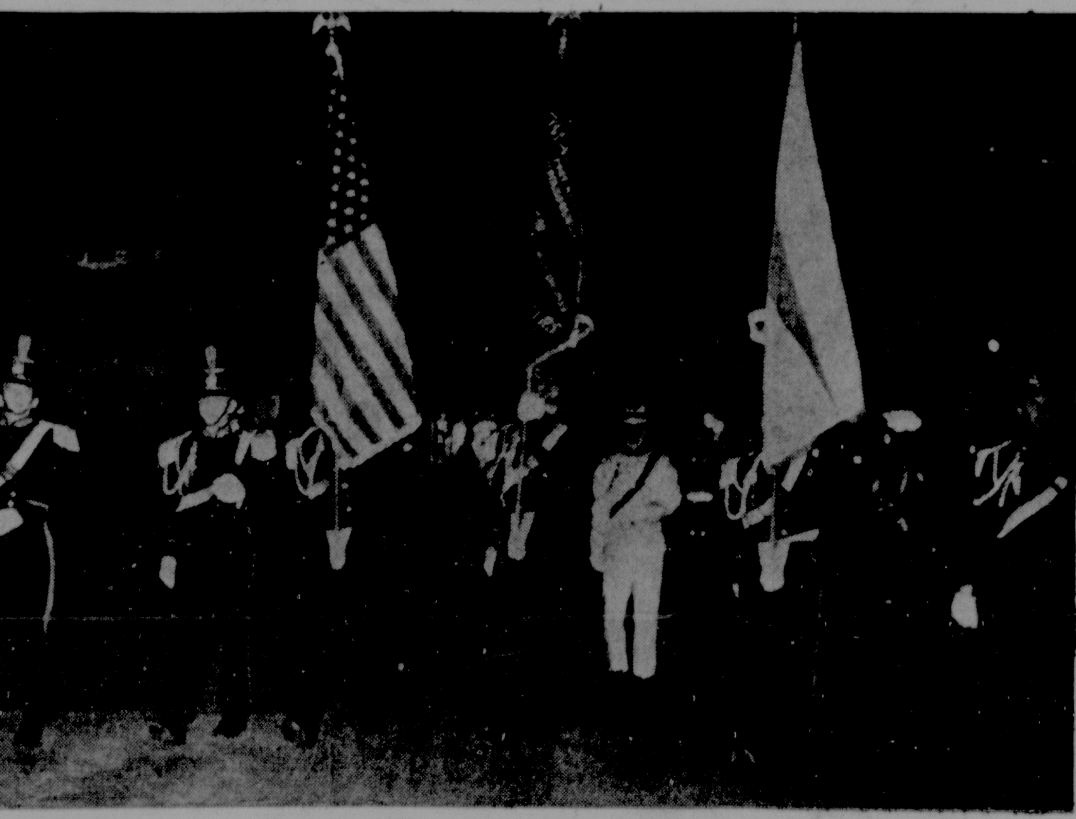

In his report to the committee, Togliatti had said the new denunciations of Stalin caused some confusion and he himself was perplexed by the Soviet decision to change the name of Stalingrad.

Giorgio Amendola, a top central committee member led the demands for more autonomy—"multiformity," he called it.

Non-Communist observers felt Amendola and the other Italian Reds, are seeking greater autonomy to avoid finding themselves in an embarrassing situation in Italy if the Kremlin suddenly changed its internal or international policies again.

Kennedy Okays Air Traffic Plan

Directs FAA On Program; May Stir Cost Controversy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy released and endorsed Sunday a special report on air traffic control which calls for a five-year capital outlay of $500 million and includes several points expected to stir controversy.

Kennedy directed the Federal Aviation Agency to start at once on implementing the 14-point program recommended by the Project Beacon task force which was charged with finding means to make future air travel safer despite great increases in flight volume.

One of the principal points expected to bring differences of opinion is the extent to which the nation's military air control system can and should be integrated into a general pattern including civilian traffic.

CAB Probing Airline When Plane Crashed

AN investigation of Imperial Airlines had been under way when one of the firm's planes crashed and carried 77 persons to death Wednesday night.

A CAB spokesman said the probe of Imperial Airlines started a few hours before Wednesday's tragic accident.

The investigation was part of a three-pronged study of the nation's non-scheduled airlines. It was ordered after difficulties involving President Airlines earlier this fall.

Wednesday night's crash, which killed a total of 74 young servicemen and three crew members, made a particularly solemn impression on residents of the Allentown-Bethlehem-Easton-Penn Argy-Bangor area, and on Passaic and Clifton, N.J., which lost 22 servicemen.

The CAB said it is continuing its probe into safety and maintenance of supplemental airlines, their financial condition and their business practices. Inspectors also prepared to move the crashed plane's four engines to Washington, D. C., for detailed study, and medical examiners were still working on positive identification of the crash victims.

Civil Aeronautics Board investigators have been visiting supplemental airlines officers throughout the country for a month — ever since a President Airlines plane crashed in Ireland and the firm could not meet all its flight commitments.

The study involves about 24 companies which have active operations. About 10 other companies have certificates but are not currently using them.

Non-scheduled airlines are required to comply with most of the safety regulations of the regularly scheduled airlines as far as maintenance, crew proficiency and operations are concerned.

Unlike the regular airlines, however, they do not operate over assigned routes and may conduct up to 10 flights a month between any pairs of cities they wish. They also have authority to operate domestic charter flights without limit as to frequency.

Many of the companies are small and rely primarily on military charter traffic. Imperial, for example, as of last June 30 owned one 4-engine Constellation and one twin-engine 046 and leased another Constellation.

As projected in the Project Beacon outline, considerable work would be made of the military facilities. And the combined annual operating cost of the combined systems is estimated at $1 billion.

The capital outlay of $500 million is double that projected earlier by the FAA.

The report proposes the use of only the radar part of the military SAGE—Strategic Air Ground Environment—system of weapons control for the handling of air traffic, along with extensive modification and improvement of the present FAA system.

The task force—headed by Richard R. Hough, operations vice president of the Ohio Bell Telephone Co.—said that after weapons control had been decentralized, the new system could take over from the SAGE centers the peacetime defense function of aerial surveillance.

The old Bolshevik and ex-foreign minister turned aside newsmen's questions about his reported expulsion from the party and his recent denunciation by Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the 22nd Soviet Communist party congress.

"Let's change the subject," he said, as he left the train that brought him without escort from Vienna to Moscow and almost certain political oblivion.

His wife, Paulina, was much more animated and seemed flustered.

"We had a fine trip," she said. "Many of the passengers came to our compartment to say 'goodbye' and good luck."

On Stalin's orders, Molotov, now 71, a small, round-faced man with icy gray eyes, once said "No" to President Roosevelt, "No" to President Truman and "No" to President Eisenhower.

Rayburn Still Is Critical; Rallies Some

BONHAM, Tex. (AP)—Speaker Sam Rayburn remains in critical condition in his battle with incurable cancer, but he was reported Sunday to have "rallied considerably since yesterday."

A bulletin from the 15-bed hospital where he is a patient added: "Breathing has improved. He has taken liquids well. Infrequent periods of alertness."

Rayburn's personal physician, Dr. Joe Risser, said Saturday death could be only a few hours or days away.

Testimony to this was the steady stream of cars that passed the two-story, tan-brick hospital Sunday as Bonham residents drove by to pay their respects.

Many of the cars were occupied by elderly couples, some by entire families, and a few by teenagers. They moved slowly as solemn faces turned to the vine-covered entrance of Risser Hospital. Some cars paused a minute or two.

Inside the 15-bed hospital — a converted residence — are only three other patients. Three nurses go quietly about their duties.

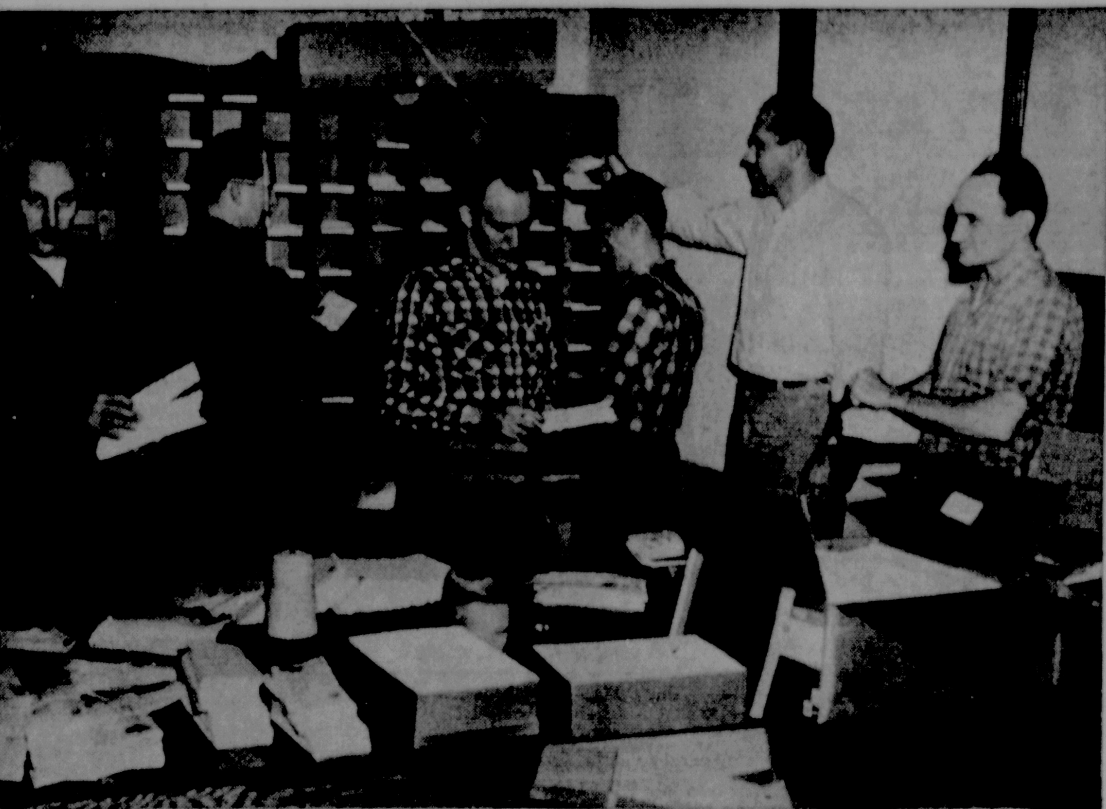

Rayburn, 79, who has wasted from his usual 170 pounds to less than 130, has few visitors.

Sunday morning, a sister, Mrs. S. E. Bartley, spent some time with him. During the afternoon, three doctors and a chaplain from Baylor Hospital in Dallas, where Rayburn's cancer was discovered, spent about 10 minutes in his room.

An aide, John Holton, said the speaker slept well Saturday night, appeared more alert than usual and seemed to be aware they were calling his name. Holton said Rayburn appeared to be in pain but could no longer speak.

Molotov Home; Fate Not Known

MOSCOW (AP) — V. M. Molotov looking calm and unafraid, came home to Moscow Sunday to wage an apparently futile fight for his place in the Communist party.

The old Bolshevik and ex-foreign minister turned aside newsmen's questions about his reported expulsion from the party and his recent denunciation by Soviet Premier Khrushchev at the 22nd Soviet Communist party congress.

Mrs. Estelle Fleming, society executive director, said yesterday that the 9,947 letters were handled in one week by 55 persons who donated 160 hours of work to the project.

In addition, Girl Scouts will distribute posters urging support of the campaign throughout the area.

Of the total money collected, 84 percent stays in the county, 10 percent goes to the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis and Health Society and six percent goes to the National Tuberculosis Assn.

Walkout Ended In Lancaster

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP)—Members of Local 285 United Auto Workers of America voted Sunday to accept Armstrong Cork Co.'s latest contract offer, ending a 12-day-old strike.

About 3,000 workers at two plants had been affected by the walkout. The company said workers would start reporting back to work tonight and all shifts would operate tomorrow.

Now For The Cure...

A Hangover Is (?) --Physiological

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—There is one big reason why man has failed in 2,000 years of hunting for an effective hangover cure.

It's because no one knows all that a hangover is — physiologically.

The hangover remedy most relied on — another drink of the same — is dangerous because it leads to alcoholism.

But research is pegging down more physiological bits and pieces of the post-alcohol syndrome — or the hangover result of too much drinking.

These conclusions were reported in a news conference Saturday at the Symposium on Alcohol and Civilization at the University of California School of Medicine by Dr. Olof A. Forsander of Finland and Dr. Leonard Goldberg of Sweden.

Raises Then Drops

Dr. Forsander reported on studies showing that drinking first raises and then drops the blood sugar level below normal.

The more you drink the lower goes the blood sugar level, said Dr. Forsander, chief of the department of physiology of the Finnish State Alcohol Monopoly's research laboratories.

PEOPLE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — U.S. hopes of putting a man into earth orbit this year faded almost completely Sunday with the indefinite postponement of a planned orbital flight by a chimpanzee.

The U.S. man in orbit effort depended wholly upon the success of the projected ape shot, originally planned for Tuesday.

In a brief, lunch table encounter, Walter Williams, Project Mercury operations director, admitted only that the launching had "some problems."

This was as far as Williams would go. Lt. Col. John Powers, spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, meanwhile was casually advising newsmen that the launching had been delayed a week to 10 days.

No Announcement

Powers said there would be no NASA announcement of the delay because the agency had never announced a specific launching date, except that it would not be before Nov. 14.

In any case, the NASA press office was unmanned and news of the postponement, which involves thousands of dollars in travel expense for newspaper, radio and television reporters, was circulated by word of mouth.

The postponement came as a powerful blow to President Kennedy's announced goal of placing an American astronaut in orbit before the end of 1961.

Two Russian cosmonauts were successfully orbited earlier this year.

Informed sources said a leak in the space capsule's inflight altitude control system caused the postponement.

This means that the capsule, built by McDonnell Aircraft of St. Louis, will have to be removed from atop its modified Atlas missile booster. Removal, inspection and replacement will take at least a week, probably longer.

Since it takes about six weeks to prepare for a manned shot, the delay means that it will be next to impossible to launch the chimp, await evaluation of the data and prepare another missile and space craft for the manned shot this year.

Even as the launching was being postponed, a large portion of the Atlantic fleet—18 ships and some 50 aircraft—was being deployed across the ocean from Cape Canaveral to the African coast.

These ships would have been used in the recovery of the chimpanzee's space capsule after it had made three passes around the earth.

Fuel Limitations

Because of their fuel limitations, the destroyer escorts and recovery fleet will have to return to port before returning for the launching attempt.

Cause of the postponement was attributed by informed sources to a leak in the hydrogen peroxide system which controls the position of the capsule in flight.

The leak was discovered during a routine test Sunday. Because hydrogen peroxide is very corrosive and could have affected other electrical systems within the capsule, the space vehicle will have to be dismantled and given a complete checkout.

The original plan called for the Atlas to hurl the two-ton capsule into an orbit ranging from 100 to 150 miles above the earth at a speed of 17,400 miles an hour. After three trips around the earth lasting 4½ hours, the chimp carrying craft was to be returned to earth by parachute. The impact area was to be about 1,000 miles southeast of Cape Canaveral in the Atlantic Ocean.

He reported opposition groups in Grandola Sunday tried to mass children in front of a police station to prevent voters entering the polling booth there.

Even in working class sections of Lisbon, where the boycott appeal seemed more likely to be heeded, voting appeared brisk.

Salazar Wins In Portugal As 80% Vote

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — The Portuguese voted Sunday for the unopposed parliamentary slate of Premier Antonio Salazar, and the government claimed 80 per cent of the eligible voters turned out in the face of opposition calls for a boycott of the polls.

The election created little excitement, despite the appeals of Communists and other anti-Salazar groups for demonstrations in the streets. Riot police and Republican guards massed to quell demonstrations — but none appeared.

How many voters cast blank ballots in protest apparently will not be revealed. Officials said after the polls closed they would only be able to give a comparison of the number of votes cast with the list of registered voters in each reporting area.

Salazar supporters had campaigned for at least a million votes for his candidates against a total list of just 1.3 million registered voters. Interior Ministry officials said they expected to count between 900,000 and a million favorable votes for the slate that could not lose.

The minister of the interior, Dr. Alfredo Rodrigues dos Santos Jr., reported 20 scattered incidents. He said one man was killed Saturday night in pre-election disorders at Almada, an opposition stronghold, when a group of men tried to attack a police station.

Body Of Space Monkey Is Found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The body of a tiny squirrel monkey who died in an exploding missile was found Sunday in wreckage dredged from the Atlantic Ocean.

The 1½ pound primate, named Goliath, was in the nose cone when an Atlas missile blew apart over the Cape Friday 30 seconds after it was launched on an intended 5,000-mile flight.

A boat and skin divers retrieved several parts of the shattered missile from shallow water about 100 yards off the Cape. Experts studying the debris found Goliath's body in his badly smashed metal capsule.

State College Gallery Of Fine Art Will Open With Show Wednesday

By ALICE HASTINGS

GRAND OPENING of "The Gallery" — the East Stroudsburg State College's first art gallery — will take place Wednesday, with a large and varied show culled from the collections of art lovers in the Pocono and Wilkes-Barre areas.

"This will be a dream come true," says Dr. Madelon Powers, head of ESSC's art department. "We in the art department have tried for years to obtain space... a permanent room for exhibitions. We want this college endeavor to be of benefit to the community at large too. For our opening we are bringing in oil paintings, a few etchings, watercolors and serigraphs, but mostly oils."

"Who has lent us exhibits? Well, the David Harrisons, the Sterlings, Strausers — of course Mr. Strauser is a painter and examples of his works are in the show, sent to us by other collectors — Mrs. Agnes Dyer, Mrs. Nancy Hebard, Edward Driebe, N. D. Lambert, Edward Welles and Ernest Wyckoff."

Student Hostesses

The opening exhibit will be on view three days, Wednesday through Friday, Nov. 17, from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Dr. Powers, Miss Irene Mitchell, and George Johnson, members of ESSC's art department, will try to be present when their classes and other duties permit, but a group of student hostesses, instructed to answer questions that may arise, will be on duty to show visitors about.

Mary Lou Wingerter, Anolink St., East Stroudsburg, heads the group of hostesses. Miss Wingerter, a junior, is president of the college Art Club. Other hostesses are: Joan Cerra, Phyllis Fetzner, Clare Grimes, Maude Hovis, Lois Hostler, Carol Hudock, Ruth Kissinger, Carol Kriss, Maureen McGooey, Diane Purdy, Jo Ann Saller, Joan Sperring and Judy Rames.

Most Valuable

Perhaps the most valuable item in the show is not an oil, but a print, lent by the Harrisons. It is a Georges Roualt, an etching of "A Man's Head." A conte crayon by another well known artist, Chaim Gross's "Nude," is lent by the Strausers. Ernest Wyckoff has lent, among others, a still life and a landscape by Cullen Yates and Dr. Madelon Powers, an oil by the Colombian artist, Agelvis.

George Johnson, Assistant professor of Art at ESSC, is represented, to his surprise, by an oil mosaic, "Red-Headed Girl," sent in by the Strausers. "I had no idea they were offering by mosaic," Johnson remarked. "But of course I'm flattered."

Johnson has two bits of sculpture on exhibit in a show at Binghamton, N. Y. at present; during the latter part of November he will be shown in an exhibit at "The Ridge," in the Pocono area.

Future Plans

Among the shows planned by the ESSC are department for this winter and spring are an exhibit of Japanese Children's Art; Graphics; Picasso; Art from Israel and Work of Children at the ESSC Laboratory School. These will be open to the public.

"We hope to show art of all types," Miss Mitchell states. "From the conservative to the very modern—something to interest everyone, you may say."

Occasionally during the year there will be shows designed to correlate classwork at the college. These will be closed except to "family"—students and faculty of the college.

World's earliest known man, 600,000-year-old Zinjanthropus boisei, was discovered by British anthropologist L.S.B. Leakey in Olduvai Gorge, a part of the Great Rift Valley of Tanganyika.

Commenting on the Trucking Industry's investment in Pennsylvania, PMTA's General Manager Edward Gogolin said "the total assessed valuation of the Commonwealth's 47 third class cities is less than the Industry's two and a half billion dollar investment in the State."

He pointed out that in the registration year ended May 31,

1961, Pennsylvania's motor truck owners paid $72,458,610 in license fees and Pennsylvania gas tax—more than the annual maintenance and snow removal costs on all Pennsylvania state highways.

The Trucking Industry's total payroll of $2,497,295,000 is more than the Commonwealth's appropriations for all purposes, including highways, for the two years ended May 31, 1961.

Local Post Office Cited For Savings Bond Program

POSTMASTER Fred H. Rhodes said today he had received a letter from William H. Neal, National Director of the U. S. Savings Bond Program, commending the local post office for the promotion and sale of Savings Stamps during the past year.

"In this 20th anniversary year of the United States Savings Bond Program," the letter read, "Americans in all walks of life own more than $44 billion in Series E and H Savings Bonds — an all-time record. You have had a real share in this success."

"During the school year your help is especially needed to sponsor and service the School Savings Programs in your area. In the country as a whole, some six million students are now attending schools where the Stamp Plan is in operation. We would like to see this number increased substantially during the coming year."

Postmaster Rhodes reminds the public that Savings Stamps are on sale at the post office at all times, as well as in the schools on Stamp Day.

Adults can buy them, too, he added.

Newlyweds Uninjured In Rt. 611 Crash

DELAWARE WATER GAP—A newly-married couple from New York escaped injury yesterday at 6:10 p.m. when their car slid on the rainsoaked Route 611 here.

Chief of Police Fred Decker said Mrs. Joan Rozzini, driver, of Queens, N. Y., told him the car began to slide as she started to leave the ramp and then she lost control.

The car smashed into three guard rails, came back on the road and then went down an embankment. It remained upright through the entire trip.

The couple were married Saturday and were on their way to spend their honeymoon in a resort in the Poconos.

MD Kickoff Meeting On Wednesday

MONROE County fund chairmen will take part in a giant kickoff meeting for the fourth annual march on muscular dystrophy in Carbon, Monroe and Schuylkill counties at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Lehigh County Municipal Building.

Atty. John P. Lavelle of Weissport, who heads the 1961 financial appeal in the three-county area, is summoning all volunteer workers for the purpose of charting plans for the Thanksgiving Week movement.

According to Atty. Lavelle, research is the main objective of this year's campaign. He points out that medical research represents the only hope for muscular dystrophy victims.

No cure or effective treatment is known for the crippling, muscle-wasting disease which afflicts more than 200,000 persons in the United States, Atty. Lavelle reports.

The lawyer adds, "Funds are vitally needed for increased medical research as well as to maintain and expand MDA's nationwide network of clinics and the patient service programs carried out by the chapters."

Travel-minded ESSEN, Germany (AP)—Statistics show that West Germans are the most traveling people in the world these days. Nearly 45 per cent of the population left home on vacation trips this year. Americans ranked next with 40 per cent.

The Big Question

Now that all the smoke and fury of the air tragedy at Richmond last week, when 77 Army recruits were killed, has subsided somewhat, the big question still remains. Whether the answer is forthcoming remains to be seen.

A shocked nation has dried its tears, but who can fill the void in the homes of such places as Bethlehem, Newark and Bangor? There the tragedy will live in the hearts of families as long as there is life in their bodies. While the nation will slowly forget, these families will never be able to erase the horror of sudden, flaming death.

The big question is: Just why were Army recruits being transported on a second rate air line in a time of peace? We could understand it if we were at war and their transportation was a dire emergency.

One story has it that the plan was evolved to bolster the business of the commercial airlines. Economy-wise, this seems foolish when we have the Military Air Transport Service, which is supported by taxpayers' money, standing idle. If there is need for air transport nonetheless, why not ship them on properly supervised airlines, rather than on a second-rate line that had been severely censured for previous flights.

As far as bolstering business is concerned, we have heard cries from the railroads go unheeded for years. We have watched railroad deficits mount for years, and read stories of proposed mergers in the press every day in an attempt by the railroads to keep operational. If it was to bolster the nation's economy, why not ship recruits by rail and help this faltering business which is so vital to the national defense and other business?

It will be a long time before the politicians will be able to explain away the death of the nearly four score young American men in a blazing inferno, just because someone wanted the business!

Opinions Of Other Editors

Puppeteer Plays Puppet

Western observers in Berlin report that Soviet Army officers have put on East German Army uniforms and have taken over control positions in some key points on the border of East Germany and in that country.

Evidently the Communist keepers of the prison-state have become distrustful of the young Germans they have hired or drafted into the satellite army; since numbers of these have escaped into West Berlin.

For several years American, British, and French diplomats have been willing to show their credentials to East German officers as agents of the Soviet military occupation forces but not as representing a claimed authority of the unrecognized East German puppet state to exclude them.

Now the question arises: Will the West accept Soviet Army officers as agents of the East German pseudo-government as agent in turn of the government of Premier Khrushchev in Moscow? Or more importantly: Can the Russian Communists still find enough Germans whom they dare accept as agents to do their work in East Berlin?

Curiously, in all this, no one seems to ask who represents the free will people of East Berlin or East Germany. Under communism such trifles are inconsequential.

The Russian Bombs

At the moment of writing, the Russians have detonated more than 30 major bombs, one of them the largest ever detonated by man, the more than 50 megaton bomb. The Russians cannot be altogether without purpose although it was suspected for a time that Khrushchev was using the bomb for terroristic propaganda. The series is too large and is over too long a period of time to be merely terroristic propaganda. There must be other purposes.

The Russian bombs have been of all types and kinds, including an underwater bomb and possibly the anti-missile, neutron bomb. The Russian excuse that they need to explode as many bombs as all the NATO powers is nonsense. An experimental test discloses all its data to the scientists of all countries. Therefore, it is not sound for the Russians to contend that tit-for-tat explosions are needed. Furthermore, the United States have not been exploding bombs.

The Russian effort is undoubtedly designed to develop anti-missile bombs and to develop nuclear war-heads for long-range rockets which could damage our missile sites. More than anything, the Russians fear our Polaris fleet. The submarine nuclear weapons which we have, the Russians have not yet equalled. But they are apparently working on anti-missile defense bombs which they use against us.

Obviously Soviet Russia and the United States are at war, but the means of conducting the war are different from anything we have heretofore known. When Soviet Russia, for instance, explodes a 50 megaton bomb, a warlike step has been taken which effects the entire Earth and a point can be reached at which more explosions of bombs will have the effect of battles won or lost.

The air, the sea, the soil of the entire Northern hemisphere are being polluted. It will not be long before Red China retaliates which can geographically involve the Southern hemisphere, particularly the nations of the Indian Ocean. This body is to the Afro-Asian countries what the Mediterranean Ocean is to the European-African-Asian countries. The difference, however, is that the countries which lie on the Indian Ocean are utterly defenseless, being among the secondary peoples whose history has been one of long dependence on Europe.

Soviet Russia's effort to establish military supremacy over the United States thus becomes a mathematical equation. If Soviet Russia has more nuclear weapons in greater variety than we have, we can be defeated. This then is something that the American people need to know in understandable terms. The President has said that we are superior to the Russians in every respect, but the Russians give the impression of being superior. Kennedy says one thing; Khrushchev another. We prefer to believe Kennedy. He is our President and is liable to be for quite a number of years. It makes sense, in a crisis, such as we now face, to support him as one can in conscience do.

On the other hand, confidence must in some manner be established. Until the Cuban fiasco, the American people generally responded to Kennedy's youth and enthusiasm amiably. The Cuban fiasco came as a shock from which this nation has not yet recovered. Further, it is difficult to understand why, if it is our policy to go the limit in defense of Berlin, did we permit the Russians to build the wall between East and West Berlin. It would seem to be as possible to knock that wall down brick by brick, as it is going up, as to fight a major war over it.

These contradictions require explanation. President Kennedy has faced crisis after crisis since he has come into office. None of these crises were exactly of his making but statesmanship requires a recognition of the continuation of government through Administration after Administration. It does no good to object to the errors of predecessors; that is the function of the historian not of the statesman who goes right ahead accepting what he finds no matter who is responsible. When one writes historically, he must determine how much mischief was done by Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt. But politically, it is only possible to deal with today and tomorrow.

This then is the tough and trying task of President Kennedy. His judgment must be immediately right. His advisers need to be men of impeccable wisdom and patriotism. We are in a war crisis which calls for great minds and courageous spirits.

"That's right," said the customer, "but my wife is outside waiting in the car—and she's the one with the hiccups."

Snow Drop In The Atmosphere

The Pennsylvania Story

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Pennsylvanians unquestionably are showing more and more of a "brainy independence."

In these few days following last week's general election which saw so-called "upsets" more the pattern than anything else, this fact alone seems to be one of the stand-out results of Tuesday's runoff.

Veteran old political pros of both parties are doing some heavy head-shaking as they mull and re-mull the November 7 returns.

Republican areas went Democratic; Democratic areas went Republican—with splits right down the middle in many a localized area only serving to add to the eyebrow-raising and frowning on the part of the old pros.

If nothing else this tremendous hodge-podge served to underscore the point more than ever that any sort of "trend" from Tuesday's election is more remote and more impossible than ever before!

The whole affair from beginning to end was too mixed, too uncertain and too confused to pull out anything indicative insofar as gubernatorial 1962 is concerned.

Of course there were those standard, on-the-surface, routine observations of a trend this way or that—the conventional off-the-top-of-the-hat post-election summations indulged in routinely by partisan optimists, would-be prognosticators, and political soothsayers.

However the standout finger-pointing from the Tuesday fracas undeniably was the almost adamant showing of voter independence—a showing of a growing trend of "brainy independence" on the part of individual Pennsylvanians.

Veteran politicians on both sides of the aisle privately concede the point—with understandable reluctance.

It again points to the "growing diminishing returns" of the machine politico of yesterday; to a growing lack of control of independent thought and actions on the part of voters from a party machine or organization standpoint.

In the heyday of yesterday's political years the fashion used to be to pop in and out of a voting booth quickly the mark of a straight party-line or organization voter.

Today the trend has changed markedly. The fashion now apparently is to spend a little time in the voting booth—voting for individual candidates rather than a speedy flat party vote.

move that requires a little thought and a little more time.

Again, this was clearly indicated in Tuesday's vote. The splittups, the "foul-ups" and the mixed returns forcefully exemplify the point.

But perhaps underscoring this even more was the scramble in the great city of Philadelphia where a vaunted Democratic machine machine of old was supposed to turn in majority—"easily"—of 100,000 to 200,000 votes to insure the carrying of the state for the Democratic candidate for State Supreme Court.

It's history now of course that this noted machine, under the guidance of Philadelphia City Chairman William J. Green, to the flabbergastation of old time political old pros, turned in only a piddling 80,000-plus majority sufficient to insure the election of the opposition Republican judicial candidate!

Philadelphia is one of the last remaining vestiges of theoretical machine dominance — and as Tuesday's returns clearly showed, even in this hold-out, the "brainy ones" in effect ruled the roost!

Democratic old pros around Capitol Hill here are shuddering at the thought (although they publicly of course profess otherwise)—but this does not mean Republicans have any sort of clear sailing, as they try hopefully to read "trends" into last Tuesday's balloting.

They too are just as vulnerable to "brainy independence" as their Democratic counterparts!

With Walter Winchell On Broadway

Neither emotional burdens nor physical ailments can prevent a trouper from being one. Such dedication touches the old and young. Susan Strasberg was 16-years-young when she appeared in the stage version of "The Diary of Anne Frank." During one performance she went on despite a high fever and severe laryngitis. Helen Hayes, later said: "I went backstage and saw Susie with a rosy, feverish face, hardly able to talk. I was so touched, I sent her a letter the next day, telling her: 'Please, please don't be so dedicated. The show does not always have to go on.'"

Stage-fright is not confined to amateurs. The greatest of them have been at its mercy. Two nights before the "South Pacific" premiere Ezio Pinza was gripped by a severe case of nerves. During the run-through the show Pinza—who was a Met-opera vet—was so nervous he couldn't be heard beyond the fifth row. The producers and backers were terrified. They expected a disaster. On opening night, of course, Pinza was triumphant.

Artistry has no borders—since it reflects boundless imagination. And the artist is equally whimsical. For example, few men have collected the critical trophies extended to Richard Rodgers. The most influential critic in his career is Mrs. Rodgers. To a large degree he relies on his wife for the initial reaction to a new song. If she nods and to a new song. If she nods and says it is very nice—he is worried. He's certain he has it when the melody gets an emotional response from Mrs. Rodgers.

Rex Harrison is the very model of a modern major sophisticated actor—full of dash and aplomb. Nevertheless, he had his embarrassing moments on the stage. . . . One happened when he was a supporting player in "Charley's Aunt." After the first week he was almost fired. Harrison has described the predicament: "An old boy in the cast who had played in the comedy for thirty years had me hysterical with laughter. The only kick left in life for him was to try and break up the other actors—make them go up in their lines. He'd run his back to the audience, take out his false teeth and put them in his hat. It was difficult not to laugh."

Bea Lillie's performance as a pixie extends beyond the footlights. Her hobby, for example, consists of painting the heads of children. When requested to explain her working methods, the star twinkled: "I do children's heads out of my nut. I paint on the floor and show my work on the piano in the dark. I call myself Beatrice Van Gogh." Her wonderful nonsense is probably best exemplified by the following: When a pigeon flew in the window of her apartment and perched on the ledge, she inquired: "Any messages?"

Starcross is generally allied with a form of tyranny known as hard work. In the long ago Ethel Barrymore prevailed upon producer Charles Frohman to cast brother Lionel in the part of an Italian organ-grinder in the drama titled "The Mummy." Lionel's preparation for the role was intense and resourceful. Before rehearsals began he devoted weeks to learning the correct Sicilian accent. He then became acquainted with an organ-grinder to gain an understanding of the role and learned to play the hand-organ, Lionel's pretending in "The Mummy" was his initial click.

The Allen-Scott Report

New Red Drive

Washington — The Communists are on the verge of launching their long-threatened offensive to overrun pro-Western South Viet Nam.

The large-scale attack, which Russia has been mounting for months, will be supported by Russian-piloted jet planes.

That's what President Kennedy has been told by General Maxwell Taylor since returning from his first hand survey of Red - menaced South Viet Nam. Foremost among the ominous details reported by Taylor are:

- An estimated 35,000 regular and guerrilla North Vietnamese forces are concentrated in South Viet Nam or in Laos, near the former's border. Of these Soviet-trained troops, 15,000 are North Vietnamese regulars and 20,000 guerrillas.
- Five Communist airfields have been built near the South

Viet Nam border. The fields, spotted by U.S. reconnaissance planes, have been constructed in the past several months. Two of them have just been completed.

• A number of Russian MIG-17 jet fighters were seen on one of these fields—located in Laos, near the town of Tchepone, on the South Vietnamese border. At the time the jets were observed, four large piston-type Soviet cargo planes also were on this field.

• On two of the other fields, other Russian cargo planes were unloading supplies, including artillery guns. The discovery of the MIG-17s on the Communist airfield near South Viet Nam is the first appearance of these jet fighters in this region.

This is deemed to mean only one thing: These planes being piloted either by Russians or North Vietnamese. It is known that a number of North Vietnamese pilots have been trained by the Soviet.

There is no question that the numerous cargo planes, being used to mount the Red offensive, are piloted by Russians. The U.S. has photographic proof of that.

A reconnaissance photograph of the Hanoi airport, in North Viet Nam, showed more than 60 Soviet planes of all types. Also a number of Russians working on and around these planes.

Hanoi is the main operating base for Soviet planes and personnel in the drive against South Viet Nam.

What Diem Wants—President Kennedy's inner council is split over how far the U.S. should go in helping South Viet Nam resist the Communists' offensive.

General Taylor favors sending several thousand communications and logistics troops to bolster South Viet Nam's 160,000-man army, tiny air force and equally small navy. The airforce consists entirely of propeller-type planes. It has no jets or pilots trained to fly them.

Secretary Dean Rusk and Dr. Walt Rostow, special White House assistant who accompanied Taylor to South Viet Nam, are opposed to any U.S. military moves there. They are particularly against a series of forceful measures advocated by President Ngo Dinh Diem.

As vigorously urged by Diem, they are:

- U.S. "support" to enable his small airforce (some 20 planes) to bomb the five Communist airfields in Laos on the South Vietnamese border. This "support" would take two forms: (1) Provide South Viet Nam with planes to replace those disabled or lost in attacks on the Reds; (2) mechanics and technicians to maintain Diem's airforce.

• U.S. air and naval "assistance" to land several thousand jungle fighters in Laos and North Viet Nam to attack Communist supply depots and communications centers. Diem claims to have the necessary troops to make such assaults behind the enemy's lines if the U.S. will provide the aid and naval facilities to "deliver" them.

• U.S. Navy to block any attempt by Red China to use its ships or planes against South Viet Nam. Diem fears that once the Communist offensive gets under way, Red China will strike at his country with bombing raids and hit-and-run naval attacks. He wants U.S. carriers, now patrolling that area, to be directed to ward off such blows.

• U.S. backing for a demand in the United Nations for the neutralization of North Viet Nam. Diem wants the U.S. and the members of the SEATO alliance to take this diplomatic initiative against the Communist bloc as a counter move to their threatened military offensive against his country.

General Taylor considers Diem's first two proposals both militarily feasible and advisable. Taylor believes South Viet Nam can destroy the Communist airfields and put a sizable force behind the Reds' lines to disrupt their supply and communications systems.

Rusk and Rostow have voiced doubts about these measures on the ground they would directly involve the U.S. in combat operations in South Viet Nam.

Some of the military officers who accompanied Taylor believe that one division of U.S. Marines, with adequate air and naval support, could wipe out the Communist menace—in South Viet Nam and at the same time greatly diminish their influence and operations in adjoining Laos.

Complex Diabetes Complications

By Burton H. Fern, M.D.

In spite of insulin, diabetes remains a mystery. Insulin may keep sugar from flooding the circulation and pouring out the kidneys, while fats burn into sick-making acids. But why are diabetes-sufferers so vulnerable to infection?

Laboratory germs don't thrive so well in sweetened test tubes. Alton infections — even ordinary boils and colds — can transform mild diabetes into a life-threatening monster.

Expectant mothers find insulin need growing along with Baby. If weight rockets faster than Baby and his attachments, diabetes often rages out of control. Headaches, high blood pressure and kidney complications plague many diabetes-sufferers who are expecting.

Tests Fail

Ordinary tests don't work, because all expectant mothers manufacture milk sugar which also pours through the kidneys. Blood sugar examinations can tell the difference.

Salt and water bloat Baby and womb until Mom looks like she's carrying quintuplets. More delicate than a tiny premature, Baby weighs in at more than 10 pounds. These large babies often arrive years before Mom's diabetes.

Blood vessel trouble eventually follows diabetes. Kidneys weaken, nerves numb and vision fades as blood vessels break down. Your feet become tender boxes where the slightest scratch explodes the violent infection.

Helpful Treatment

Daily foot baths help prevent this. Lubricate dry, cracking skin with lotion or lanolin. Rubbing upwards aids circulation.

Wear clean stockings and wide shoes without irritating stitches and wrinkles. For a toenail trim, see a podiatrist, or cut each nail U-shaped, with the outside edges jutting forward. Ingrown toenails can kill, with each one you take your life in your hands.

Follow Doctor's Orders

You can prevent most complications by controlling your diabetes with that diet, insulin and medicine your doctor prescribed. Call him for even minor infections.

You can't fight back if your diabetes lurks undiscovered. Ask your doctor for the simple test. Any week can be Diabetes Detection Week!

DEAR MR. EDITOR:

Languages In Schools

Editor, The Daily Record: Last week I had the privilege of visiting the United Nations in New York.

The United Nations guide, that conducted our tour of the buildings, also gave us some facts which I think many of us are not aware of. For instance, of all the guides employed at the United Nations, only FIFTEEN PERCENT are Americans. The reason the percentage is so low is because the guides must speak English and another language.

Our schools are not offering foreign languages at an early enough age for the students to become fluent in it. The idea of waiting until a pupil is in the 9th grade to start a foreign language is too late. Why shouldn't our graduates have a chance as a United Nations guide as well as other countries when the USA is paying more than 40% of the expenses for the U.N.?

Many of the large important firms, including export and import, require that their secretaries have a knowledge of a foreign language.

In the world of today, with foreign countries only a matter of hours away, another language is almost a "must" for our citizens of tomorrow.

If all parents were to demand foreign languages taught at an earlier age perhaps our schools would offer it.

NBC sent Edwin Newman and a film production crew out to Sauk Center, Minn., to cover a celebration in honor of the late Sinclair Lewis (Sauk Center was the locale for Lewis' famed bestseller, "Main Street.")

Newman shipped 10,000 feet of film back to New York, but nobody could find it when the time came to put it on the air. Finally, NBC's top sleuth solved the riddle. The Sauk Center film had been stored under "Polio"—a tribute, as it were, to the vaccine that bears Jonas Salk's name.

George Heister tells of a woman who invaded a psychiatrist's office cradling a white duck in her arms. "Can I help you?" inquired the psychiatrist. "Oh, it isn't I who need help, it's my poor husband," explained the woman. "He thinks he's a duck." (Everything's coming up neurosis.)

Overnight Price Changes

By William A. Doyle
Q. I still do not understand why the price of a stock should change between the close of trading one day and the opening of trading the next day. For instance, if the final trading price of a certain stock is "40" ($40 a share) on Monday, it seems to me that the first trading price of that stock the next day (Tuesday) should also be 40. Sometimes it is. Sometimes it isn't. Who controls these price changes?
A. Nobody "controls" stock market prices or price changes. If prices were "controlled," we

Pleads Guilty As Accessory

READING, Pa. (AP) — Robert Lee Stamm, 23, Pottsville, pleaded guilty Friday to being an accessory after the fact of murder and was sentenced to two-to-four years in Berks County prison.

Stamm's father, Adam C., 50, recently pleaded guilty to slaying Mrs. Peggy Marie Timmons, 34, and her baby daughter, Carla, last March. He is serving a jail term before beginning a life sentence.

The bodies of mother and daughter, along with that of John F. Hyneman, 32, were found in a burning automobile alongside the city reservoir north of here.

President Judge Warren K. Hess approved dismissal of murder charges against the younger Stamm in connection with all three deaths before pronouncing sentence Thursday. Hess also approved dismissal of a murder charge against the elder Stamm in the death of Hyneman after the state said it had no additional evidence to what was produced in court in the earlier trial.

Mrs. Timmons, a widow, had been dating both the elder Stamm and Hyneman.

Still In Grace

BERLIN (AP) — Mikhail G. Pervukhin, denounced as a member of the Stalinist antiparty group at the recent Soviet Communist party congress, apparently still is ambassador to East Germany. Invitations to a reception celebrating the Bolshevik Revolution bore Pervukhin's name as ambassador.

would have a rigged market. And, under those circumstances, the best advice I could give would be to "stay away from the stock market."

Fortunately, that is not the situation. So, I don't have to sound any such dire warning.

You have either overlooked or misunderstood the one basic thing that makes stock trading on securities exchanges tick.

A stock market is an auction market. Buyers and potential buyers bid by naming the prices they are willing to pay for stocks. Owners of stock who want to sell or who might be willing to sell name the prices they are asking for their stocks.

When a buyer and a seller agree on a price, some stock is sold. A trade takes place. Let's say the price was $40 a share.

If that transaction happens to be the last trade in that stock on Monday, the stock will close at 40—as in your question. Then, on Tuesday, the auction market starts all over again. The first trade in that stock on that day will be "opening price." It might be $40 a share. It might be higher. It might be lower. It all depends on what price is agreed upon by the buyer and seller who make the first trade in that stock on Tuesday.

In stock market trading, of course, the average investor does not do his own auctioning. That chore is handled by his brokerage firm.

Q. I can't understand what relation volume of trading in a stock has to the change in price of a stock. If the New York Stock Exchange reports that 100 shares of a certain stock were traded on a certain day, that means that someone sold 100 shares and that someone else bought those 100 shares.

If the exchange reports that 10,000 shares of a certain stock were traded on a certain day, that means that a number of people sold a total of 10,000 shares and that a number of different people bought those 10,000 shares.

Does the volume of shares traded in a stock give any indication of whether the stock is going up or down in price?

A. No. Sometimes the market price of a stock will show a big change (either up or down) on very little trading volume. Sometimes the market price of a stock will show little or no change on a very large volume of trading.

This is one of those things you can't pin down. Some stocks make the "most actively-traded" list quite frequently. Many others plod along and seldom attract a great deal of active trading interest.

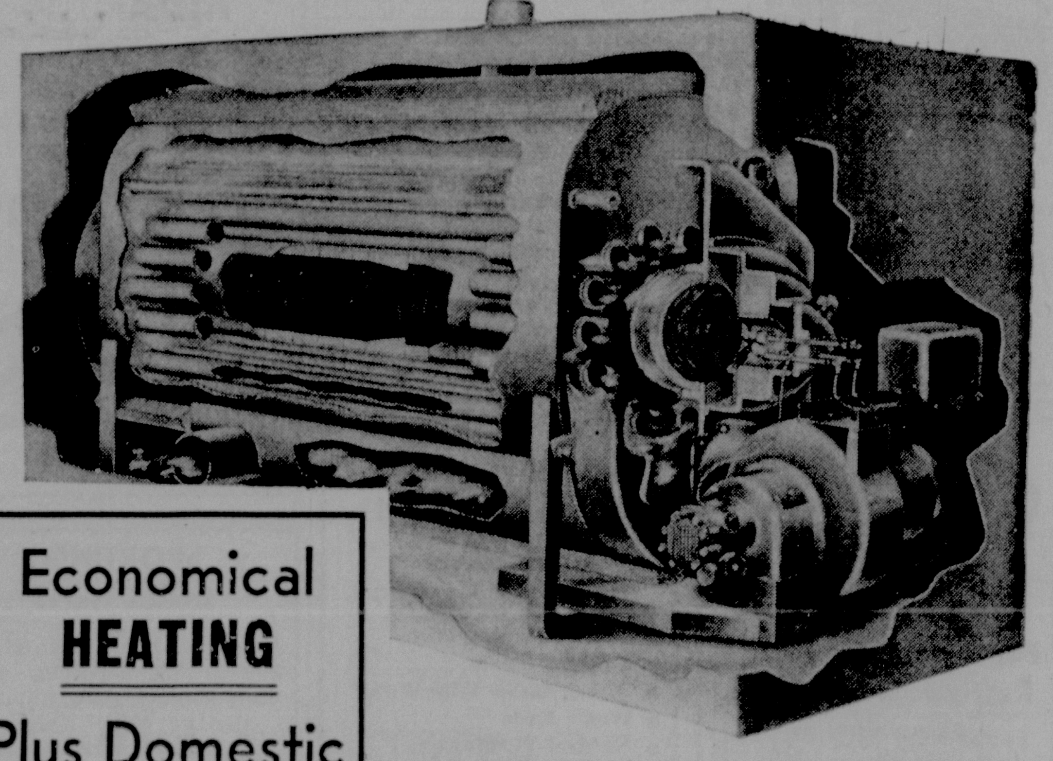

You will find many people (especially professional traders and speculators) who watch to see which stocks are most actively traded. They feel that, when a stock suddenly becomes active, it figures to increase in price.

See Coldspot Line In Sears Today

PERHAPS jet travel and intercontinental television are the chief factors in making the world smaller, but don't discount your home freezer, either!

Could there be a more universal meeting ground for citizens of all countries than the dinner table? Today... because of the rapidly soaring popularity of frozen foods and home freezers... the world's most famous dishes have become a regular part of the family's weekly menu.

Such international taste-pleasures as French souffles, African lobsters, Italian tetrazzini and German schnitzels are now being frozen, packaged by restaurant chains and sold across the counter to thousands of Americans every day.

But these "gourmet" foods form only a small percentage of the more than six and one-half billion pounds of frozen food sold last year. In dollars

If you're bothered by drafts around the air conditioner—and they'll be more annoying as the weather gets colder—you can block them with rope caulk. This comes in a roll and is easy to apply, requiring no tools. Just unroll the amount needed and press firmly into the crack or over the meeting place of the window and the conditioner. To remove, peel it away.

and cents the figure came close to three billion dollars.

Statistics like that clearly indicate the way frozen food has taken hold. The industry actually started thirty years ago when an American wildlife surveyor discovered that fish and game stayed fresh when quick frozen. But it has only been the past 10 years that the public has eagerly responded.

Much of this recent enthusiasm must be credited to more efficient and economical home freezers. The new models offer not only greater capacity and better freezing, but work-saving conveniences as well.

The new Coldspot 15.8 cubic foot upright, for example, provides completely frostless freezing. Using the principle of "blast freezing"—the same as used by commercial packing houses—the unit freezes up to four times faster than conventional methods. Since zero degree air is constantly being circulated throughout the freezing compartment, "dead" spots are eliminated.

As a result of the system, frost never forms, so packages never stick to one another or to the freezer itself.

The unit also boasts a porcelain-enamelled liner that will not absorb food odor and is exceptionally easy to clean.

Other important features include magnetic door gaskets that seal the cold in, flush-hinging that permits placing the freezer against the side of a wall or cabinet, adjustable cold control and a 551 pound food storage capacity.

The entire line of Coldspot upright freezers is available exclusively at Sears, Roebuck and Co., Main St., Stroudsburg.

NO NEED TO bake today, for with a modern frostless freezer—such as this new 15.8 cubic foot Coldspot— that pie will taste as though it just came out of the oven. By using a system called "blast freezing," the new Coldspot never allows frost to form, yet freezes food up to four times as fast as conventional methods. In addition, the unit boasts a porcelain-enamelled liner that will not absorb food odor. Coldspot freezers are available exclusively at Sears, Roebuck and Co., Main St., Stroudsburg.

THERE are many ways to choose a color scheme when you are repainting a room, and one of the best is to use the colors of a major piece of upholstered furniture or a rug as your starting point. Christmas Gifts For Home

HINTS on Christmas giving for the home:

A dishwasher is likely to be a more favored Christmas gift than a milk stool by the practical 1961 housewife. Other time savers, such as new compact washer-dryer units and scrubber-polisher floor machines, are high on her "wanted" list.

Newer portable television sets add to household convenience, easy to tote from kitchen to nursery or on family vacations.

There are some with 19-inch screens that are only 13 inches deep.

Small replicas of early American furniture will charm youngsters and television sets are fun. One cuddly poddle of washable acrylic fibers may be disassembled from its wooden stool and thrown in the washing machine.

Practical gifts can be handsome. Sterling silver vegetable dishes or centerpiece bowls that can mix or match are sought-after Yule gifts. A new silver vase in a timeless Oriental design is an exquisite reminder.

brance for Mom.

Gifts for Dad include ottomans that double as magazine storage, and smoking accessories. A new hand-decorated gas table lighter of porcelain is chic enough to please Mom, and offers Dad a year's supply of lights without refueling.

Houseware gifts such as electric fry pans, blenders, mixers, can openers, ceramic casserole cookers, broilers, best sellers across the nation last Christmas, are top favorites again.

Just Between Us —

—By Bobby Westbrook

I feel better about meetings now after a lapse of 24 hours spent without a pencil in my hand and in the company of young people with other things on their mind. Actually the AAUW Conference in Philadelphia was — and I begrudge the word — stimulating.

I begrudge it because I was most unwilling to be stimulated any more to good deeds. But I concede it because one thing the conference did make clear is that there is justification in my very proper pride in reporting the activities of what AAUW referred to as "voluntary associations" which we commonly call women's clubs.

It is this American genius for organizing in order to share common interest and promote community projects that makes us unique in the world in the amount of voluntary work we do. Abroad, if the government or a wealthy patron doesn't do it, it doesn't get done.

Senator Margaret Chase Smith's suggestion of an international workshop on Peace by the women of the world could probably settle more than any number of Summit conferences. To this, I add my own suggestion that as a super Peace Corps we send representative club women to organize Home Ec Clubs in the Congo, Hospital Auxiliaries in India, Little League Auxiliaries in Laos, DAR's to Ecuador, Garden Clubs in Guatemala, and Woman's Clubs, BPW's, Soroptimists and AAUW's in every Iron Curtain country they could get in.

As many an American town council and state legislature has found, there's nothing can stop a woman's group once it sets its heart on something like garbage collection, better schools, homes for the aged, or peace.

And, with variations, it has worked before — look at Lysistrata back in 411 B.C.

New Jersey Governor's Family To Bulge Mansion

By Joy Miller
AP Women's Editor
Trenton, N.J. (AP) — When you have nine children, you can't just pick up and move into any old place. Not even if it's the governor's mansion.

That's why Mrs. Richard J. Hughes, who's expecting a 10th child next spring, hasn't made up her mind about living at Morven, the New Jersey governor's residence, after her husband is inaugurated in January as successor to retiring Gov. Robert B. Meyner.

"There are nine bedrooms, so sleeping space is adequate," brunette Betty Hughes ticked off Friday. "But there's no room geared for a playroom."

"The house is lovely. But the Meyners are the first to live in it, and there never have been any children there. So I don't know how it would work out."

"I don't like to waste my worries, so I didn't think about it until the election was over. Now I'll try to decide on this trip."

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes left Friday on a Caribbean cruise. On the return trip they'll stop off at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., where the seven younger children, accompanied by their grandmother, will join them Nov. 22 for a long Thanksgiving weekend.

"Dick really hasn't seen the kids since he started campaigning in February. And once he gets Arlington PTA Open House Tues.

The November meeting of the Arlington Heights Parent-Teachers Assn. will be held Tuesday night with open house scheduled to begin at 8. Parents will have an opportunity to visit their children's classrooms and learn the work being taught. They will assemble in the gymnasium beforehand. The program is designed for parents, not children.

A preview of a course "Parenthood in a Free Nation" by the Pennsylvania State University will be presented to the organization with a view to setting up a study-discussion course for interested parents.

Mrs. Wyckoff On Russia At Wesleyan Guild

The Wesleyan Service Guild of the Stroudsburg Methodist Church at their meeting on Tuesday night at 8 at the church will feature Mrs. E. Holt Wyckoff as guest speaker. Mrs. Wyckoff will present "Pictures of Russia" in both words and pictures.

Members have been asked to bring in World Banks and their contributions for the Thanksgiving baskets.

back, things will close in again," she mused.

Mrs. Hughes was up until 3 Friday morning writing checks—"I like to get bills paid by the 10th"—and lining up what the children will need in her absence, and replying both to election congratulations and sympathy messages. Hughes' 85-year-old father died Sunday.

The Hughes live in a three-story house with a huge basement playroom in which each youngster has his own locker. The house is Georgian Colonial "but the decor is Hughes-Murphy-Sullivan. Some furniture is his, some mine, some was added for economy. Life is too short to worry about matching periods in furniture."

Mrs. Hughes, born Sullivan, was a young widow with three small boys when she met Hughes, a widower with four children. Her husband, Air Force Capt. William J. Murphy, was killed in a crash in 1931.

They were out trick-or-treating with the children Halloween night, 1954, and ended up at the home of a mutual friend.

"We were married six months later. I was in the big league overnight. The minute I said 'I do' I was the mother of a big family."

Since then they've added two youngsters. They hope fervently the newcomer is a girl, because the family stands now at two girls, seven boys.

Soroptimists Design Own Holiday Dish

The mystery of what the Soroptimists intended to do with a quarter, an apron, and a pair of scissors was solved when sticky-fingered member emerged from their November dinner meeting at the Penn Stroud Hotel bearing the holiday plates they had designed under the direction of Miss Betty Martin, program chairman.

Miss Martin provided the plates and the patterns and the members chose their own theme with angels, Christmas trees, holly, snowmen, and candies among their creations. Decorations for the dinner were even more unusual. The centerpiece featured a large porcelain chicken flanked by smaller ones holding candles flanked by four large colored eggs. Clusters of grapes, intermingled with miniature pearls and apples, set a Thanksgiving theme.

At the business meeting, Christmas plans were high on the agenda. The club will again entertain elderly women at a Christmas party at the PP & L building in Stroudsburg with the time and date to be announced later. Betty Noack is chairman.

The club's own Christmas meeting will be held Dec. 14 at Stricklands Inn, Mount Pocono with Anne Strickland as hosts. The entertainment will be a surprise, but members are asked to bring their bathing suits and an exchange gift.

Voluntary Assn. Work Unique In US

One phase of American life that never fails to amaze foreigners is the amazing amount of work accomplished by voluntary associations. Mrs. Edith Sherard, association Social and Economics Issues of the American Assn. of University Women told the 200 women of the Southeastern area neighborhood at their meeting at the Warwick Hotel in Philadelphia on Saturday.

"This is not because we are a nation of joiners, but because by gathering people of common background and interests into a group they can provide the improving and pioneering in programs of community value."

Each voluntary association has its own unique contribution, she said, in preface to outlining some of the proposed changes in structure to make the work of the AAUW more significant.

Local Delegates
The Stroudsburg branch of AAUW was one of 13 in the area represented at the conference, with six delegates headed by the president, Mrs. M. R. Kiefer. Others attending were Miss Katherine McFarland, Dr. Ruth Kistler, Miss Ruth Black, Mrs. David Mazer, and Mrs. Horace Westbrook.

Also attending the luncheon meeting were Mrs. Roy W. Engle, president of the Pennsylvania Division and Mrs. Herbert W. Anderson, vice president of the Middle Atlantic Region.

Morning discussion groups included one on "Proposals for Continuing Education for Women," led by Dr. Althea Kratz. Hotel, past president of national AAUW and former dean of women at the University of Pennsylvania; "The Educated Woman—Her Impact on the World Today," by Mrs. Ruth Weir Miller, executive director of the World Affairs Council of Philadelphia; and "Community Needs in the Field of Higher Education" led by Miss Lucile Scheuer, dean of women, Temple University.

Mrs. John V. Hastings III, co-chairman of the program, gave the keynote speech at the opening assembly.

The Wyckoff Shopper

STROUDSBURG, PA.

And so, to continue our look at Spring fashions for 1962!

Embroideries will also be in vogue in the immediate fashion future, with otherwise simple black or navy dresses having lingerie touches at the edge of bracelet-length sleeves, or perhaps on the collar or at the waistline. One of the most distinguished of the daytime dresses shown was a White Limoges silk linen sheath by Herbert Sondheim. This had a back-buttoned bolero effect, and was worn with a tiny black pillbox hat, long black gloves, and one rather large pin, set with jet, at the waistline. The simplicity was devastating, and it was described as the perfect ensemble for town wear, as well as a striking example of a clever use of black and white.

Some of the hemlines were ruffled; some waistlines were seemingly, by the optical illusion of a peplum; and at least one party sheath was trimmed with three rows of rather wide silk fringe around the bodice, and an overskirt of very long fringe, planned to give one the appearance of perpetually dancing The Twist.

All of us were much impressed by the use of contrasts, as in an Estexez sheath of silk linen, the bodice of which was beige, and the wrap-around skirt of which was black. The latter was cut to a high point rising dramatically above the waistline. Doris Hinton was so taken with this she vowed to design one along similar lines for herself. First time she wears it, we'll be glad to let you know whether or not she did justice to the original. I'm betting she will!

In Spring 1962, we are going to see a greater number of cowl necklines. Sometimes the front will be only slightly draped, with most of the drapery in back. At other times the drape will be loose and graceful all the way around. My favorite, I think, was the two tiered cowl in color that extended over the collarless neckline of a little suit.

Because I have loved capes since, as a very little girl I had one of navy and white wool, I was delighted to see them so plentiful and so strikingly styled for the season ahead. There were short capes with suits and there were long capes for dress or rainwear. Some were of double-knit cotton. The one for rain-or-shine that would most tempt me to buy was camel color, very full at the back, with double breasted styling, brass buttons, and two large pockets, also brass-buttoned.

A pretty cape coat of light blue poplin with detachable hood made one of the blonde models look like a Christmas tree angel walking through a storm. And there were two alligator raincoats—one boxy, one double breasted and belted—that looked for all the world like leather. We were told that, if one could see them at close range, it would be obvious they were fabric as soft as a cloud to the touch.

Perhaps the most stunning of all, from my point of view, was an Emerald Souffle Cape with an inverted pleat running from the back yoke all the way to the bottom . . . swaggery, fluid, and elegant.

Necklines were widely varied . . . I've mentioned the cowl, but in outer wear there were also many ring and standaway collars.

This, of course, is not all of the fashion story for Spring 1962 . . . but it does prove, I think, that we will have a great deal of flattery and variety in the months ahead. It is also enough, I'm sure, to what your appetite for an entire new wardrobe. What's more, it needn't be an expensive one. Some of the things we saw were surprisingly modest in prices. Among the most expensive was an elaborately jeweled formal gown by Oleg Cassini. Of black and white cotton ottoman with ribbon-zine jewel bodice and jacket it was an absolute dream—until the model began walking. All she could do was mince along, looking uncomfortable and ungainly. That gown you couldn't afford . . . even if you'd desire.

GARRY HEARD and Bob Engler, Pen Argyl's talented halfbacks, will be carrying nine game scoring streaks into the Bangor game Thanksgiving.

Heard, who scored two TDs in Saturday's 39-0 Lehigh-Northampton League win over Parkland, has 111 points in nine games. He went into the game a point behind East Stroudsburg's Harold (Mach 2) Myers for area scoring honors. Myers did not score against Nazareth and now has 99 points. Heard has had a touchdown in every Green Knight game.

Engler has also scored in every game but in two contests he managed only extra-point production.

Against Parkland, Engler gained 150 yards on 16 carries, while Heard has 103 yards in 12 carries.

Short Battle
The Trojans put up a battle only for the first quarter. Pen Argyl whipped for three touchdowns in the second period and after that the Knights scored almost at will.

Pen Argyl rolled for 460 yards on the ground, its best ground production of the year. The Knights completed two of five passes for 24 yards.

Bill Jackson, Dick Kuster and tackle Ralph DeLong were the only other players besides Heard and Engler to score against the Trojans.

Jackson scored on a seven yard run, Kuster, a fullback went across from the two and DeLong, who was shifted to fullback for two plays, went over from the three. DeLong, a senior, carried the ball twice, when the Knights reached the Trojan 10 in the final period. He went seven yards on the first try and added three more yards and six points on his next attempt. It was the first TD in the big tackle's career.

Engler scored on a nine-yard run to open the Knight scoring and Heard went over on a one-yard plunge and an 18-yard run. The win was the eighth in a row for the Knights, who have lost only to Muhlenberg Twp. in the opener.

Mike Zito's placement failed to clear the crossbar but his earlier conversion offset the Slaters' pair of incompletions.

The fatal forward culminated a sweep of the field by the Panthers after Jim Judd's recovery of Leo Reimer's fumble just four yards away from a third Bangor touchdown. Bangor was in the process of wrapping up the game via a drive from midfield when this single but costly error occurred.

Last Down Plays
Hellertown assembled three first downs running, the last on a desperation punt formation with four yards needed, and followed with another successful last down play, with the same yardage needed. This time a 31-yard aerial, Hosler to Larry Parsons, clicked, advancing the ball to Bangor's 25 for Hosler's telling shot after two misses in the same series.

After a scoreless first half, dominated by the Maroon despite helpful calls for the Panthers, Hellertown acquired a 7-0 lead with a 69-yard march kept alive midway by a 15-yard penalty against the Slaters. Hosler finally crossed on a 17-yard roll-out.

Bangor retaliated immediately on Reimer's 65-yard dash through right tackle after the kickoff to the 29 and Ron Bet's six-yard pickup on the first play but still trailed by one point.

Wildrick Sneaks
Before the quarter expired another touchdown was added and the lead role changed. Hellertown's punt after the kickoff provided possession on the Panthers' 47 and a profitable ground assault, interrupted only by a five-yard fine inside the 20, followed. The final five inches were claimed by Terry Wildrick on a sneak.

The Slaters, obviously riled by an incapacitating injury to veteran tackle Bill Holland, who was admitted to St. Luke's hospital with a fractured right leg suffered on the second half kickoff, stormed back for still another, in again forcing Hosler to punt soon after the kickoff. And the push from Hellertown's 49 moved along quickly, again ignoring a penalty enroute, only to die with the bobble.

Unfortunately Bangor did not have the cushion to absorb Hellertown's final stab. This was in part due to the inability to make a superior first half performance pay off.

The Slaters had their opponents in the rut at the start but surrendered on downs on the 28. Later in the period Bangor penetrated to the three only to be rebuffed. In the second, keeping control on a pass interference penalty with four minutes left, Hellertown made its only bid and was stopped on the 38. Bangor rebounded rapidly to Hellertown's 26 but time ran out.

The Trojans put up a battle only for the first quarter. Pen Argyl whipped for three touchdowns in the second period and after that the Knights scored almost at will.

Pen Argyl rolled for 460 yards on the ground, its best ground production of the year. The Knights completed two of five passes for 24 yards.

Bill Jackson, Dick Kuster and tackle Ralph DeLong were the only other players besides Heard and Engler to score against the Trojans.

Jackson scored on a seven yard run, Kuster, a fullback went across from the two and DeLong, who was shifted to fullback for two plays, went over from the three. DeLong, a senior, carried the ball twice, when the Knights reached the Trojan 10 in the final period. He went seven yards on the first try and added three more yards and six points on his next attempt. It was the first TD in the big tackle's career.

Engler scored on a nine-yard run to open the Knight scoring and Heard went over on a one-yard plunge and an 18-yard run. The win was the eighth in a row for the Knights, who have lost only to Muhlenberg Twp. in the opener.

Loss Of ACF Foundry At Berwick Recalls History

(Editor's Note: The town of Berwick, Pa., faces the prospect of losing its biggest industry—car building, Paul Trescott, whose family roots have been in the Berwick area since Revolutionary war days, tells in the following story of the beginning of the car industry there, its dramatic growth, and now the impact of a possible shutdown. Trescott is a member of the Philadelphia Bulletin staff.)

By PAUL TRESCOTT
Philadelphia Bulletin
BERWICK, Pa. Nov. 12 (AP)—A chill breeze whispered through the evergreens in Pine Grove cemetery. If, beneath them, an unusual stirring was noted, it could be pardoned, for there in a mausoleum lay the remains of Frederick H. Eaton.

They had been placed there in 1914, only 15 years after he had been the architect who fashioned the massive American Car and Foundry Company, now ACF Industries.

Three short blocks west is the main gate of the ACF PLANT, through which came the news a few days ago that by October, 1962, this huge car building plant would be idled permanently. Eaton must have turned in his final resting place.

It was tragic news for 1,900 employees, close to 40 per cent of the town's industrial employment. It was a bitter blow to the community, which for 121 years has seen the building wagons, agricultural equipment, railroad, mine and other cars, and munitions and tanks for two world wars.

Here the first steel railroad passenger car in the world was built—a subway car for the New York system. Steel freight and passenger cars by the hundreds of thousands were the handiwork of Berwick men.

I have known Berwick intimately since the days when immigrants by the hundreds came in and steel cars were turned out in massive numbers. I witnessed the Americanization of these immigrants, the assimilation of the people, and the progress of the second, third and fourth generations into suburban residents in handsome homes.

The story of ACF and Berwick began in 1840, when Mordecai W. Jackson and George Mack opened a foundry, 25 by 40 feet, on the site of the present Hotel Berwick at Third and Market streets. The purpose was to make agricultural implements.

This firm went through various changes, building heavy wagons and doing blacksmithing, and in 1849 it merged with a foundry which had been established three miles away by William H. Woodin, who had set up a place for making stoves and plows. This Woodin was an away-back ancestor of the man who later became secretary of the treasury in the first Roosevelt administration.

This firm became Jackson and Woodin. Jackson was an expert mechanic and manager of men; Woodin a far-sighted salesman. A small machine shop was added, an upright steam engine began to furnish motive power. Tinware and spouting were made. Pipes were cast for waterworks.

Eventually the firm went into manufacture of car wheels and small narrow-gauge cars for the anthracite mines. Soon the firm of Jackson and Woodin acquired a reputation as car builders. A rolling mill came into being, and almost every year saw notable additions made to the products.

In 1892 C. R. Woodin retired as president of the company, and in 1896 Fred Eaton succeeded him after an interim president. I interviewed C. R. on his 90th birthday. Eaton had been a moulder who had advanced on sheer merit. Eaton was neither a small plant nor a small town man in his thinking. It was an era of mergers, of big business, when U.S. Steel and other giants were being formed. Eaton was infected with the fever and with vision. He brought together the 13 largest car builders of the country into American Car and Foundry.

Berwick was the parent plant, the largest, and Eaton's love. Through the years as the Eatons, the Woodins and their families controlled ACF through its directorate and executive committee, Berwick felt secure. But with the death of William H. Woodin, the secretary of the treasury, there were misgivings. More than one Berwickian felt that it was only a matter of time until the sun would finally set over the vast works which lay just west of Pine Grove cemetery.

It is painful to see an old friend suffer, equally painful to see a loved community suffer a serious but not necessarily mortal wound. Through the years I knew the Eatons, the Woodins and their successors. In World War I, as a young newspaperman, I was paid for telephoning the Woodin home every night with the latest war news—there were no teletypes or radios then. The Woodin homes were on the Heights, a 1,200-foot eminence to the north of the town. Now it is the property of another friend, Earl Wise, founder of Wise Potato Chip Company, who is left by the prospective demise of ACF as the leading industrialist of the town.

ACF shut down the massive plant, which in wartime employed 8,000 to 9,000 people, drawn from many miles around, but I'm sure it will never lack the spirit of the community.

My family and my wife's have been rooted in this and nearby communities since Revolutionary war days. And if we have learned anything through the generations and through our own lifetimes, Berwick will not take this latest blow lying down. It will be a sad reflection on the modern generation if it doesn't fight back to something even better, as it has in the past.

Dear Abby

Quick And Snappy!

Dear Abby: I would like to know if it is possible for a student to do his homework while sitting in front of a television set which is going full blast. Thank you.
STUDENT'S MOTHER

Dear Mother: Send me the student's report card and I'll send you my answer.

Dear Abby: My husband's brother is a physician. I kept asking my husband to please take our two boys to his brother's office to have them checked over. Lloyd had a bad cough that lasted all summer, and Clyde had a rash on his feet that we couldn't get rid of. I got tired of waiting so I took the boys to another doctor and paid this doctor in cash. I have yet to hear the end of it. What would you have done, Abby, under the same circumstances?
DOCTOR'S RELATIVE

Dear Relative: I would have called my husband's brother made an appointment with HIM at his office, taken the boys and paid HIM.

Dear Abby: I am 13 years old and my mother has talked to me about the facts of life only once and that was when I was ten. I would like to talk to her again about this subject because there are many things I don't understand, but when I mention it she tells me she will talk to me "later," but "later" never comes. If it is a word I want to have explained dealing with sex, she tells me to look it up in the dictionary. How can I get my mother to tell me things a girl should know?
TOLD NOTHING

Dear Told: Not all mothers know how to tell their children the "facts of life." (It's not their fault—THEIR mothers didn't know how to tell THEM.) Your public library has some excellent books on this subject for girls just your age. Ask your librarian to recommend a few.

Confidential To Married In White But Blue: You are expecting too much. A marriage license is not a license to drive a man.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to Abby in care of this paper. Enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

For Abby's booklet, "How To Have A Lovely Wedding," send 50c to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Red Cross Relief

HALIFAX, N.S. (AP)—The 5,000-ton freighter Lord Viking cleared port Friday with 258 tons of Red Cross relief supplies destined for hurricane-ravaged British Honduras. The cargo, brought here from Montreal and Toronto, includes foodstuffs and building supplies.

Steel Firm Has Drop In Profits

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Standard Pressed Steel Company reports profits for the first nine months of this year were down about 40 per cent over the similar 1960 period. President H. Thomas Halliwell, Jr., told stockholders Sunday that net earnings totaled $1,303,000 equal to 56 cents a share, compared with $2,525,000 or 94 cents a share last year. Third quarter profits, however, increased about 20 per cent. The firm, headquartered in suburban Jenkintown, earned $402,000 equal to 15 cents a share in the third quarter this year compared with $340,000 and 13 cents a year ago. Net sales in the first nine months totaled $65,387,000 compared with $64,569,000 a year ago. Call The Record with news tips. $5, $3, $2 awards weekly.

My Sincere Appreciation and Thanks to the many Voters and Friends who helped in my election for Justice of the Peace in East Stroudsburg.

Chester R. Staples
